what are we to make of the information society many prominent theorists have argued it to be the most profound and comprehensive transformation of economy culture and politics since the rise of the industrial way of life in the 18th century some saw its arrival in a positive light where the dreams of democracy of connectivity and efficiency constituted a break with the old ways but other thinkers viewed it more in terms of the recurrent nightmare of capitalism where the processes of exploitation commodification and alienation are given much freer rein than ever before in this book robert hassan a prominent theorist in new media and its effects analyses and critically appraises these positions and forms them into a coherent narrative to illuminate the phenomenon surveying the works of major information society theorists from daniel bell to nicholas negroponte and from vincent mosco to manuel castells the information society is an invaluable resource for understanding the nature of the information society as well as the meta processes of popular opinion suggests that information has become a distinguishing feature of the modern world where once economies were built on industry and conquest we are now instead said to be part of a global information economy in this new and thoroughly revised edition of his popular book author webster brings his work up to date both with new theoretical work and with social and technological changes such as the rapid growth of the internet and accelerated globalization and reassesses the work of key theorists in light of these changes this book is essential reading for students of contemporary social theory and anybody interested in social and technological change in the post war era uniting a team of international and interdisciplinary scholars this volume considers the views of early twentieth century european thinkers on the creation dissemination and management of publicly available information interdisciplinary in perspective the volume reflects the nature of the thinkers discussed including otto neurath patrick geddes the english fabians paul otlet wilhelm ostwald and h g wells the work also charts the interest since the latter part of the nineteenth century in finding new ways to think about and to manage the growing body of available information in order to achieve aims such as the advancement of western civilization the alleviation of inequalities across classes and countries and the promotion of peaceful coexistence between nations in doing so the contributors provide a novel historical context for assessing widely held assumptions about today s globalized post modern information society this volume will interest all who are curious about the creation of a modern networked information society whether termed the network society the knowledge society or the information society it is widely accepted that a new age has dawned unveiled by powerful computer and communication technologies yet for millennia humans have been recording knowledge and culture engaging in the dissemination and preservation of information in the early information society the authors argue for an earlier incarnation of the information age focusing upon the period 1900 1960 in support of this they examine the history and traditions in britain of two separate but related information rich occupations information management and information science repositioning their origins before the age of the computer and identifying the forces driving their early development the early information society offers an historical account which questions the novelty of the current information society it will be essential reading for students researchers and practitioners in the library and information science field and for sociologists and historians interested in the information society
